Professional Diploma in Applied Transpersonal Psychology

The Professional Diploma in Applied Transpersonal Psychology is a three-year part time course to undergraduate level. It offers a broad education with major components in personal development and supervised practical skills.

The skills modalities include Active Sandplay, Voice Dialogue, Energetic Processing, Dreams and Breathwork.

If you need a skills training we can adapt the program to provide you with exactly what you need.

This course has been approved by the Australian Counselling Association. See www.theaca.net.au.

Our aim in the Course

To provide a skills-based experiential training within a clear theoretical and ethical foundation that enables graduates to practice in a transformative manner. Our aim is to train the best possible therapists to support those who want to discover their own inner nature.

There are two goals in therapy as we conceive it – to mature and clarify a person's behaviour and relationships, and to open the road to self-discovery.

Similarly, there are two goals in transpersonal work – the search within, to the dynamic origins of ourselves, and without, to the expanse of subtle realms of vibration that we call soul and spirit.

This professional course has been designed to provide you with a profound transpersonal training.

Mission Statement

The course at the Crucible Centre will impart the following:

- A systematic and coherent body of pertinent knowledge and theory in experiential workshops;
- Skills training in a setting that models a workplace environment;
- The clearing of egoic imbalances and limited belief systems in order to raise consciousness so you may develop the intuition to sense energies;
- The integration of learning and personal experience with theory and practice so that you may work in a holistic manner;

The understanding that ego development and spiritual transformation go hand-in-hand as one unified process of human evolution, beginning before birth and leading to the realization of our true Self;

On completion of this course you will have the required skills to work as a transpersonal psychotherapist, and the confidence to start your own practice.

What is the Transpersonal?

The transpersonal expands consciousness beyond the five senses to encompass our spiritual nature. It includes the body, mind, ego as well as soul and spirit. Everything in the universe is formed around energy, and only by including the energetic level can we hope to make deep and permanent changes.

Transpersonal psychology strives to combine discoveries in modern psychology and psychotherapy with insights from the world's contemplative traditions, both East and West, as well as transpersonal experiences from our clients and ourselves.

Why Choose to Work in a Transpersonal Manner?

When you develop the skills and experience of the transpersonal manner it

- Works with the whole person, including the spirit and the soul;
- Bypasses the mind to address the core issues around which you were formed;
- Give you an inner centre to balance your life, and provides such nourishment and certainty that you can trust in yourself;
- Prevents burn-out so you can be freshly creative in your work;
- Answers the profound questions: "Who am I?" and "What is my destiny?"
- and enables you to provide a positive foundation for your clients, rather than patching up and struggling to alter superficial behaviour patterns.

The Benefits of Working Transpersonally.

Transpersonal psychology was pioneered by Carl Jung. He argued that "psychology is fundamentally misconceived if it does not seek to understand all human spiritual possibilities," and through this seeking to find the understanding needed for self-realisation.

It is the most inclusive of all the psychologies, for it covers the whole of human life from conception to death, including the full range of transpersonal and mystic experiences. It goes beyond personality to subtle systems of energy within us and without.

The Crucible Community

Working in a transpersonal manner is most effective when the facilitator is present with an open heart, and this we have to learn. For this reason we at the Crucible Centre create a community of laughter and fun and comradeship that supports the heart to be open, and through that for intuition to flower.

This is a rare educational experience that will help you to support each other to bring out the best in each of you so that we may, together, make a difference in this world.

Our program is experiential – that means you learn through interaction with others in seminars rather than through the traditional methods of lectures and examinations. This offers a realistic environment that is inspiring. This way of training through heartfelt self-knowing is growing all around the world.

We are proud of our students and our graduates, and how they are sharing these ideas with others. We are passionate about contributing our skills and knowledge and achieving a high level of personal and professional excellence.
